Safety instructions

TECHNOLOGICAL RISKS

(industrial, nuclear or the transport of dangerous goods)

In the event of a serious industrial or radiological accident, campground occupants would be alerted by the warning signal broadcast by the PPI (Plan Particulier d'Intervention) sirens on the sites at risk.

The alert can also be broadcast by cars equipped with loudspeakers (depending on the case, fire department, law enforcement or municipal vehicles).

The warning signal sounds for 3 times 1 minute, separated by a short silence (national warning code).

The end of the alert is announced by a siren, which emits a continuous tone for 30 seconds. This signal means that the danger has passed, and that compliance with safety instructions is no longer necessary.

Depending on the situation, the operator can broadcast the alert using the means at his disposal (PA system, megaphone, etc.).
